QUARTER OF A CENTURY OF HOPE YEARLY REPORT OF THE POLICE.

Los Angeles' Dream of Twenty-five Years Ago About to be Realized, Showing That Hope Deferred Does Not Always Make the Heart Sick.

Few people, perhaps, are aware that Los Angeles began an agitation to secure a railroad to Salt Lake City twenty-five years ago. At that time Senator Clark had not earned his millions, and many of the men now interested in building the road to the Utah city had not entered on their business careers.

The following article is copied from the Evening Express of December 22, 1875—just twenty-five years ago today: "LOS ANGELES AND SALT LAKE. Important Railroad Meeting Last Night.—The People Awakened. Views of Citizens on Railroad Extension to Salt Lake—A Committee Appointed to Forward the Enterprise and a Mass Meeting of Our Citizens Called."

"The meeting assembled in the county court room last night was well attended by our representative business men, and the work before it was transacted with the greatest harmony. On motion of Judge McDevney, Mr. H. D. Barrows was called to the chair, whereupon Mr. W. H. Brooks was elected secretary."

"Mr. Barrows briefly stated that the object of the meeting was to take counsel together and see what the people of Los Angeles can do to expedite railroad connection between this city and Salt Lake."

"Mr. J. J. Ayers addressed the meeting at some length, pointing to the benefits which our city and county had already received from the construction of railroads in our midst, and urging that it was the plain duty of the people of Los Angeles to do all in their power to encourage the multiplication of their railroad facilities."

"While the Southern Pacific railroad had resulted in Great benefit to our city and section and would give Los Angeles the advantage of valuable outside connections, yet after all the great factor to our commercial progress and agricultural prosperity in the future would be the roads which would have our city and county for their permanent terminals."

"The object of the Los Angeles and Independence railroad is to penetrate an extensive region of the interior which is our natural back country, and to ultimately form a junction with the Southern Utah road."

"This would place Los Angeles and Salt Lake City in railroad connection, and would in effect give us a complete overland route via the central route."

"The construction of this road, giving the intervening territory access to the Pacific ocean, would at once establish an important trade between Los Angeles and Salt Lake."

"The speaker urged that we should form a close alliance with the people of Salt Lake, who are equally interested with us in the completion of the road, and that we should place ourselves in harmonious communication with Senator Jones, who has already out of his own means done so much toward the great work."

"The speaker then read and the meeting adopted a series of resolutions relating to the advantages already had from the Los Angeles and Independence railroad to Santa Monica, as well as those to be gained by building the line on to connect with Salt Lake, also offering to cordially cooperate with Hon. J. P. Jones in such plans as he may deem the best, in order to secure the speedy extension of the Los Angeles and Independence railroad as far as the city of Cajon Pass, to such point in the interior as he may determine as the probable point of connection with a road to come west from Utah."

"Judge McDevney spoke of the resolutions, endorsing them, and urging that Los Angeles was the natural outlet to the ocean of Inyo, Southern Nevada, Northwestern Arizona, and Utah, and that before the Central Pacific was built Salt Lake received her supplies from this city. He further said that the interior country which the road would open to the commerce and agriculture of Southern California possessed mining resources which, with the proper facilities of transportation, would build up a large population, who would be our customers. He cordially seconded the resolutions."

"Mr. William H. Workman, in a warm speech, agreed with all that had been said."

"The preamble and resolutions were unanimously adopted, and the chair appointed his honor, Mayor Prudent, and Messrs. H. D. Barrows and C. C. Lips a committee to proceed to San Francisco to consult with Hon. J. P. Jones, and go thence to Salt Lake to lay the matter before the people there, and thereafter, if they deemed it advisable, to go East and make known our plans to the board of directors of the Union Pacific Railroad company."

"The chair appointed Messrs. Johnston, Hoover and Ferguson a committee on finance to provide for the expenses of the committee first named. San Francisco, to Salt Lake and the East."—Los Angeles Express.

Thornley, E. Ellison, W. Layton, Charles Layton, A. J. Day and Dodo Bros. to the effect that they would have three carloads of high-grade and fancy sheep on exhibition at the stock show."

After debating the question in all its phases for some time past it has been finally decided that the live stock show will be held on the State Fair grounds. The hardy stock will be placed in the stalls out in the grounds as has hitherto been in vogue at the exposition under the auspices of the D. A. M. society. The fancy and pampered animals will be made snug and warm in the south side of the exposition building. From indications to date the show will surpass anything that has ever been held west of Denver. Entries are being received for the occasion from all over the country and there will be a large collection of fancy animals gathered together which will be a source of delight to the cattlemen and an eye opener to the average citizen who thinks that all cows look alike to him."

Another edition of "Jack the Hugger" is said to be in town. His long suite is seizing old people by the neck and hugging them until their eyes protrude far enough to be knocked off with a stick. The peculiar feature about the eccentric person is that he hugs old gentlemen with the same ardor that he does old ladies. Young and handsome women he passes with scorn. He is described as being well dressed, middle aged, and of a distinguished bearing. Last evening he rushed up to an old gentleman and making some affectionate remark grabbed him around the neck and squeezed him until his hat tilted. The hugger then dashed down the street in quest of another victim. Soon he met an old lady and almost paralyzed her with his embrace. She managed with some difficulty to escape from the fellow's grasp, who muttered an apology and fled.

Moral: When the "hugger" appears, keep your hand on your pocket book!

LIVE STOCK CONVENTION.

Secretary Martin is in receipt of a letter from David J. Hill, assistant secretary of State, wherein he states that the governments of Mexico, Canada and Venezuela have been officially invited to send delegates to the convention here next month.

E. Ellison, J. E. Ellison and J. W. Thornley of Layton have notified the head of sheep, that they have been selected to represent that railroad company here during the convention week.

The Fremont County Woolgrowers' association of Idaho, representing 250,000 head of sheep, have filed application for membership with the Live Stock association.

CHRISTMAS "NEWS."

Beaver Observer: The Christmas number of the Deseret News is at hand, and we feel perfectly safe in saying that it is the best Christmas paper ever issued in the State. Those who have had the matter in hand may feel a great satisfaction in the result of their labors. We feel to say to all who have not gotten one of the Christmas numbers, that there is no way in which you can spend 15 cents to better advantage than to send and get one. If you have friends who live at a distance, especially in other parts of the country, send it to them. These papers may be had of the local agent, Robert Money, who has now a limited number on hand. Call early and do not lose the chance.
